

WHISTLE AT NIGHT AND THEY WILL COME

INDIGENOUS HORROR STORIES V2

BY ALEX SOOP (feat. Cary Thomas Cody)

Foreword: Eugene Brave Rock

Following the immense success of his debut collection of horror stories, Midnight Storm, Moonless Sky, Blackfoot storyteller Alex Soop once again scares the wits out of readers while uncovering overlooked social anxieties and racism affecting Indigenous Peoples across North America. Whistle at Night and They Will Come: Indigenous Horror Stories Volume 2 delivers stories ranging from supernatural mythology and the paranormal to post-apocalyptic scenarios, and zombie lockdown—15 tales in all in short story and novella formats. Whistle at Night coincides with the launch of Durville & UpRoute Books' new horror series, the "Tales of the Dark Series."

ABOUT ALEX SOOP

Alex Soop's urban home is Calgary, Alberta and his ancestral home is the Kainai (Blood) Nation of the Blackfoot Confederacy. While striving to entertain readers with his bloodcurdling tales, Alex imaginatively implements issues that plague First Nations Peoples such as alcohol and drug abuse; systemic racism; missing and murdered Indigenous women and girls; suicide; foster care; residential school aftereffects; and over-incarceration. He also deals with Indigenous oral mythology, such as Sasquatch, Wendigo, ghostly spirits, and the afterlife.

About Midnight Storm Moonless Sky

"These stories are certainly entertaining but they can also be relentlessly dark, and not just in traditional, bump-in-the-night sense. ... Even the stories that take the wildest flights of the horrifying and supernatural contain elements of modern Indigenous horrors."
